

Director of Operations & Finance
Southgate, North London
Salary up to £57k + benefits

Oak Hill is an internationally renowned college at the forefront of evangelical Christian education and training and an Enhanced Validated Partner of Middlesex University. In an increasingly complex and changing world, Christian ministry demands more comprehensive theological education than ever. We are committed to meeting that need, equipping ministers and gospel workers for life-long Christian ministry in the UK and beyond.

The Director of Operation & Finance will be a key member of our senior team and pivotal in delivering the effective and efficient central support services we need. But this position has a wider brief including input into our strategic planning and sound financial structure, the development of our commercial income, oversight of regulatory compliance and modelling best practice.

To be successful you will need a heart and passion for the work of the College along with a significant breadth of skills, experience and aspiration. Being financially literate, possessing strong commercial instincts and entrepreneurial acumen, you will be highly organised and easily able to lead others and build sound working relationships. In addition, you will be able to shape strategy, oversee regulation and compliance able to 'get things done' in a collaborative mission education context.

We are seeking someone with at least 3 years' experience either at Bursar, Chief Operating Officer or equivalent level and familiar with operating at Board level.

It's an exciting role with the potential to make a huge difference to how we operate and deliver across the whole college and build a strong future for the Oak Hill in support of our wider mission.

There is an Occupational Requirement that the postholder is a Christian in agreement with, holds to and lives out the theological position, aims and objectives of the college.
